The student demonstrated gaps in their knowledge, particularly in understanding the types of compounds reported from the relevant genus, which is critical for predicting the types of compounds that may be isolated from Lilium polyphyllum. Additionally, the student lacked familiarity with isolating compounds using Reverse Phase (RP) chromatography and exhibited limited understanding of the characterization of compounds, especially when dealing with crystalline structures. In summary, the student needs to thoroughly prepare in the following areas:

1. Latest Literature on the genus and related compounds.
2. Isolation and Characterization Techniques, particularly using advanced methods like RP chromatography.
3. Bioactivity Studies relevant to the isolated compounds.

A sub-committee is suggested to assist the student in these areas and evaluate his chances of success in the Ph.D program in the department of Pharmacy. The committee will schedule two meetings with the student:

First Meeting: The student will receive reading materials covering the abovementioned areas.

Second Meeting: The committee will interview to assess the student's knowledge and understanding of the suggested materials.

The sub-committee will submit a report based on these interactions, outlining the student's preparedness and potential to the next ASRB.

Committee:

1. Dr. Abdul Khaliq Jan (Convener)
2. Dr. Shaiq Ur Rehman (member)
3. Dr. Allah Ditta (member)
